RE: Introduction to Upstream Tech and HydroForecast

Dear Mr. Anabtawi and Mr. Wagner:

This letter is submitted on behalf of Golden State Water Company ("GSWC") in connection with the Court's October 23, 2024 Order granting GSWC's Motion to Enforce the Judgment ("Order") in City of Barstow v. City of Adelanto (Case No. 208568) (the "Judgment").¹ As part of implementation of the Court's Order, GSWC requests that the Mojave Basin Area Watermaster ("Watermaster") consider the enclosed memo from Upstream Tech regarding HydroForecast and its potential application in the Mojave Basin Area as a tool for improving estimates of streamflow in ungauged portions of the Mojave River.

The Court's October 23, 2024 Order requires Watermaster to, among other things:

- 1) re-calculate the Production Safe Yield ("PSY") for the Centro subarea and for the Alto subarea, including the Transition Zone;
- 2) in doing so, re-evaluate both (a) the sufficiency of any factual investigations conducted to quantify favors to be used in those calculations, and (b) the reliability of any assumptions of estimates that Watermaster relies upon when empirical data is not available to quantify factors; and

¹ The title of the Court's Order in full is "Order (1) Granting the Motion of Golden State Water Company to Enforce the Judgment; (2) Establishing a Procedure for Motions to Approve Re-Calculated Production Safe Yield; (3) Posing Questions to Be Answered by the Watermaster in the Next Motion for Adjustments to Free Production Allowance."

- 3) recommend a plan to improve hydrologic data collection for future PSY calculations that considers the recommendations in Section 6.0 of the Expert Report of Anthony Brown filed in support of GSWC's Motion.²

The Order also affirms Watermaster's continuing obligation to "rely upon and use the best available records and data to support implementation of th[e] Judgment," and "[w]here actual records of data are not available, Wastermaster shall rely on and use sound scientific and engineering estimates."³

As described in the Export Report of Anthony Brown, GSWC conducted substantial research regarding methods and technologies available to improve surface water monitoring data within the Mojave Basin Area and identified remote sensing as a technology that might be employed by Watermaster to improve estimates of stream flow in ungauged portions of the Mojave River.⁴ Following the Court's Order, and in line with the recommendations set forth in Section 6.3 of Mr. Brown's Expert Report regarding the use of remote sensing, GSWC undertook additional investigation regarding remote sensing and its application in California. GSWC identified Upstream Tech as a leading provider of remote sensing and artificial intelligence driven surface water monitoring and forecasting. GSWC requested the attached description of Upstream Tech's technology and services, specifically with regard to Upstream Tech's capacity to estimated streamflow in the Mojave Basin Area where actual measurements are not available.

After reviewing this information and receiving a demonstration of Upstream Tech's HydroForecast, GSWC continues to believe that remote sensing technology could improve data collection and estimates, fill data gaps, and improve Basin management under the Judgment. Accordingly, consistent with the Court's Order, and in particular, the Court's order that the Watermaster re-evaluate the sufficiency of its factual investigations and recommended a plan to improve hydrologic data collection for PSY calculations, GSWC recommends that Watermaster consider the information contained in the attached memo from Upstream Tech and contact Upstream Tech to explore its remote sensing technology and its potential application to the Mojave Basin Area. Ms. Laura Read, a water resources engineer and Head of Product Strategy with Upstream Tech, is copied here.

² See Order, pp. 1-2.

³ Order, p. 2, citing Judgment, § 24(w).

⁴ Expert Report of Anthony Brown, Section 6.2-6.4 [09/05/2024 Golden State Water Company's Evidence in Support of Motion to Enforce Judgment, Volume 1, GSWC 0001-GSWC 0161].

Memo: Data Tools for Mojave Basin Area

December 11, 2024

HydroForecast Description of Services

Scarcity and unreliability of access to water and weather data is an acute problem that impacts water management across the world.

HydroForecast is a platform that provides an advanced set of AI-driven hydrologic models and access to high-resolution weather and satellite data. The platform serves water supply agencies, reservoir operators and water managers globally, including in multiple regions in California.

Why does it matter here? The AI hydrology models implemented by HydroForecast have been deployed widely in data-sparse and ungauged watersheds in California and beyond to help reduce hydro-blind zones for protecting rivers, ecology, safety (floods) and assessing availability. HydroForecast is academically published and supported by California public agencies.

Example case studies

Case 1: In California, small flashy basins with highly intermittent peak flows and near zero base flow

This agency uses HydroForecast to manage large events for safety. See an example from January 2024 where flows went from nearly zero to 800 CFS in less than a day. The blue band is the 50% confidence interval, which helps for planning in times of uncertainty.

Case 2: Virtual gauge deployment for monitoring river flow on hydro-blind streams

HydroForecast's reanalysis model was deployed across the state of California to build 20-year streamflow records in ungauged rivers across the state. The model was trained on over 1,000 sites across the U.S. and validated on sites in California. Here is a zoomed-in example of two years of observed and simulated data from one such site with difficult terrain and very intermittent flows, only receiving flow after a rainstorm. The orange bands are confidence bounds around a dark purple line, which is the model's mean. At this site, the black line is the observation where the model has never seen any data from this site for training and the observation was only used for validation. HydroForecast validates models at all available stream gauges within a watershed and would provide annual evaluations during the operational period.

How can we help augment the Mojave Basin Area's current tools?

- Implement Virtual Gauges to increase the density of monitored surface water locations in the Mojave River
- Provide weather and river forecasts for flashy impactful events
 - Customers use these predictions to forecast flow events for managing ecological flow regulations, reservoir levels, and water supply/allocation.
- Construct a 20-year daily historical streamflow record in any river reach, providing more input data for a MODFLOW / groundwater system model

RE: Introduction to Upstream Tech and HydroForecast

Dear Ms. Hastings,

Thank you for the information from Upstream Tech and your offer of introduction. Watermaster would appreciate the opportunity for a demonstration of their remote sensing capabilities for the Mojave Basin Area. Staff intends on discussing the status of the PSY update at the January 22, 2025 Watermaster meeting and holding the first workshop for interested parties the week of February 3rd. We will formalize the date and time of that workshop in the coming weeks. If Upstream Tech's staff is available to provide a demonstration on their HydroForecast that week, Watermaster will add that to the agenda. We look forward to further discussions on the topic.
